EDUCATION SERIES

BY EDWARD LEE

WITH PROVOST F.F. HILL and Financial Counselor David B. Williams as featured speakers, the first in the series of Education Programs was presented at the Branch on Wed. evening, April 6. The topic for the evening was, "Problems of Increased Enrollment."

Provost Hill, who spoke first, surveyed the general problem of increased enrollment which will confront the schools during the 1960's. He reported that the demand for a college education might double by 1970, and then, citing briefly the relevant statistics, discussed the various possible methods of distributing this extra burden among public, private and state institutions. He did not anticipate he said, much expansion of the University's physical plant, but emphasized the essential problems connected with expanding the number of faculty needed to teach these new students.

Following the Provost, Mr. Williams discussed the problems in administering student aid. He described some particular cases in the operation of his office in order to point out that variables as apparently unrelated as the weather, or as basic as the general condition of the market, directly affect the number of students that come to his desk. Since so many of these variables are unpredictable, he said, it is impossible to accurately anticipate the increase in the demand for student aid which increased enrollment may create.

The most controversial point raised by Mr. Williams concerned the new financial statement required of the parents of any student requesting financial aid. This form, recently devised by the Educational Testing Service, requires a rather extensive revelation of family finances. During the subsequent discussion period strong objections were raised against it as an unwarranted intrusion into private family affairs. After the lively discussion period, coffee was served to provide the opportunity for further informal contact with the speakers.

The topic for the second in the Education Series will be "Secondary School Preparation." The speakers will be Herbert Williams, Director of Admissions, and another lecturer to be announced. The meeting will be held on Wednesday, April 27.

Dean Simon C. Hollister, of the College of Engineering, will deliver the final talk in

PASSOVER REPORT

BY ROD ROBERTSON

PREFACE AND DEDICATION: The Telluride man who comes to Oxford should prepare himself mentally, physically, and spiritually for the experience awaiting him across the choppy seas. If he neglects his responsibilities, ignores the wise warnings of the sages, or otherwise flaunts the law of averages, it is possible he may succeed. However, if he follows every commandment, heeds his elders, and applies his energies conscientiously, he will not only succeed but will leave Oxford enriched with a fruitful experience, fond memories, a slight headache, and a wrenched back. To those Telluriders (many, no doubt, as yet unborn) who will make the pilgrimage, this passover report is grudgingly dedicated.

1. Before you come it will be helpful to practice standing in an exposed snowbank for periods of time which should gradually increase until you are conditioned to last at least two hours without fainting or developing chilblains. This will prepare you for the national sport of the English. While the game is regularly played in the formal surroundings of a bus stop, or a theater lobby, it is not uncommon to see sports-loving souls joining laughingly in an important queue just for the jolly good fun of it. But it is not so easy as it looks, and Americans are warned against overindulgence lest they strain heart and soul. It is best to begin with short suburban bus queues and work up by degrees to the major league ones in front of London theatres.

3. The English are fond of pointing with pride to their ability to tolerate amiably any eccentricity in personal behavior and dress. However, it must be remarked that in England, eccentricity is rigidly stratified into classes, and the tourist is warned against introducing new strains which will probably not flourish anyway--except perhaps among the lowest orders and they don't count--except at election time. I shall describe a few varieties of English eccentrics for easy identification by the foreigner.

a. The unwashed radical who is bearded, mustachioed, wears a dirty duffel coat, no hat, and rides a motorcycle. He is most common around well-known old universities. He is usually accompanied by the female of the species who wears a burlap skirt of circus tent dimensions, a dirty duffel coat, dark turtle-necked sweaters, and close cropped hair. She

NEW FUNDS TOTAL

The Committee to Raise Funds for Deep Springs and the Association completes its campaign shortly, the work in several of the 22 areas already having been completed. At the moment, the Committee has received in cash and pledges $8,388.25 from 185 donors. There are $875.00 in pledges, most of them due for redemption in April.

CORNELL BRANCH NOTES

Cornell Branch greeted the vernal equinox this year with a snowstorm of highly respectable dimensions. As usual, Spring is far behind in coming to Ithaca.

Despite the lingering snowflakes, the Branch has had an active month. The House was privileged to play host to Joseph Szigeti and Robert Scholz, conductor of the American Chamber Orchestra, after their concert on the campus. The Branch also entertained the Baroque Trio, a chamber music ensemble, before their concert in the University theater.

Alpheus Thomas Mason, McCormack Professor of Jurisprudence at Princeton, stayed at the Branch during the two weeks while he delivered the Messenger Lectures. Dr. Mason, whose topic "Freedom in Crisis" dealt largely with the Supreme Court, was guest of honor at a reception held at the House for him with members of the Law faculty. Dr. Kali Prasad of the University of Lucknow in India also stayed at the Branch during his visit to Ithaca.

The Branch has decided to institute a series of discussions, open to the Campus, on various problems presently confronting higher education. The first program in the three-talk series, took place April 6. Provost F. F. Hill and David Williams, financial counselor for men, discussed "Problems of Increased Enrollment."

The University has decided that Cornell Branch, along with other independent living units on campus, must have a social code and inform the University of its plans for deferred rushing, which will be instituted next fall. The Branch has petitioned that it be exempted from the prohibition against fall-term "rushing" and the provisions forbidding freshmen living in organized units during the fall term. The social code merely formalizes what has been accepted Branch practice in the past.

Prof. J. S. Furnivall, our faculty guest for the spring term and a hot man on the recorder, has attempted to teach several Branchmen how to play the instrument and with devastating results. Music hath charms, and so does Prof. Furnivall, but his pupil's piercing attempts to master the instrument have led several members to wish they were as deaf as Beethoven.

GOING DOWN A THIRD TIME!

Gifts toward the support of the News Letter have been coming in, but more will be needed to see the publication continue throughout the year. Since the 1954 Convention, $178.00 in gifts have been received, $100.00 from the Telluride Assn. Alumni and $78.00 from eleven individuals. It requires approximately $75.00 to get an issue in the mail.

DEEP SPRINGS NOTES

BY ROBERT BUSHNELL

Spring is here at Deep Springs; the ditches have been repaired and cleared, irrigation started, and planting begun. 120 acres of alfalfa and 50 acres of grain will be growing this year, and down at the lake the calf crop is well on the way.

At the upper ranch a new academic quarter has begun. With the exception of Les Lee who planned to leave at the end of the last quarter, our faculty remains the same. Student morale has kept high, and students are working diligently. Our most recent lecturer was Professor Hardy of the University of Pennsylvania (formerly of the Cornell Medical School), and father of student George Hardy. Prof. Hardy delivered two lectures on "Pain." Deep Springs has withdrawn from the Northwestern College Association in favor of the Western College Association. Starting April 19th, the accreditation reviewing board of the Association will visit us to establish preliminary accreditation.

The Trustees are looking for instructors for next year. Two or three men will be needed. Our primary interests are first in a history teacher with an economics, political science, or philosophy minor, to handle the Western Civilizations course (now reduced to two years); and second in a philosophy instructor who can double in another field. We need instructors who can teach some combination of mathematics, a science (preferably a life science), religions, psychology, and languages, preferably German and Russian. Dr. McCully will remain to teach literature and composition.

Activity-wise, fencing and volley-ball hold the spotlight, rodeos are back in vogue, and we recently held our first broom polo match. A three day skiing trip was taken at the end of the quarter, and three groups of students hiked to various spots to view the early morning atom blasts. Musically, we have produced a chamber music group from local talent, and several concerts have been held.

Cornell Branch Notes (continued)

New rugs for the main hallway have finally arrived. New bookcases will probably be installed in the library to provide the necessary shelf space for the $90 worth of new books received as gifts to the Branch.

1955 SUMMER PROGRAM

STAFF COMPLETES PRELIMINARY PLANS

BY RICHARD LEOMIS

The Staff for the 1955 Summer Program has completed preliminary plans for the organization of the Session. Under the leadership of Director Charles W. Brickley, each of the Staff members will contribute to the morning lectures and group discussions on Theories and Practices of Government in the United States. The course of study itself will be roughly divided into five sections, with varying amounts of time allotted to each section. The five sections are: (I) The Colonial Background to Independence, (II) The Political Ideas of the Enlightenment and the Constitution, (III) The Rise of Jacksonian Democracy, (IV) The Rise of the "Social Welfare State," and (V) What is the American Political Tradition? Much of the work will be built around the Amherst College series of Problems in American Civilization. The students will also read selections from significant philosophical, historical, and economic works.

The Staff members form a congenial and diversified team, with each member supplying special talents, training, and experience for the effective operation of the Program. All are enthusiastic about the Summer Program and its role in the larger pattern of the work of Telluride Association and Deep Springs.

The Director of the 1955 Program, Dr. Charles Brickley, received his early education in public and private schools at Providence, Rhode Island. In 1955, he was awarded the Bachelor of Education degree from Rhode Island College of Education, having taken a Major in History and a Minor in English. He received his M. A. and Ph.D. degrees from Clark University, with a Major in American Intellectual history. His Ph.D. dissertation topic was "The Episcopal Church in Protestant America: A Study in Thought and Action." Since 1949, he has taught at the Putney School, in Vermont, where he is now Chairman of the Department of History. He has served at various times on the Academic Committee, the Administrative Council, and the School Council at Putney. In addition, he has been a dormitory supervisor and director of school activity programs there. Dr. Brickley is unmarried.

Assisting Dr. Brickley as an instructor will be Dr. Elmer D. Sprague, Jr. Dr. Sprague was born in Lincoln, Nebraska, and did undergraduate work in History and Philosophy at the University of Nebraska. Before finishing college, he served for two years in the U.S. Army. From 1950 to 1953, he attended Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar and there received his Ph.D. Degree. The subject of his dissertation was Hume's use of secondary impressions to account for passion and moral sentiment. He has taught at schools in Nebraska and Arkansas and has, since 1953, been an instructor in Philosophy at Brooklyn College. He is married and has two children.

DR. CHARLES BRICKLEY
Director of the 1955 Summer Program

The TA representative on the Summer Staff is Dr. John W. Mellor. Born in Paris, Mellor lived in Springfield, Vermont, most of the time between 1929 and 1946, when he entered Cornell. He was the first recipient of the George Lincoln Burr Scholarship and resided at Cornell Branch from 1946 to 1950. He received his M.A. degree from Cornell in 1951, and during the academic year of 1951-52, studied at Oxford on a Fulbright Award. He then returned to Cornell, where he was awarded the Ph.D. degree in 1954, with a Major in Agricultural Policy and Minors in Monetary Theory and Marketing. In September 1954, he was appointed an Assistant Professor in the Department of Agricultural Economics at Cornell. Mellor is married and has two children. He has been a member of the Association since 1948 and is currently Chairman of the Custodians.

the series on Tuesday evening, May 10. His topic will be, "Specialization in Higher Education."

The Education Series was planned as a contribution which Cornell Branch could make to the University community. The Branch decided that the topic of education, and the particular problems which currently confront Cornell, and therefore the Branch, would be of particular interest to students at the University and to members of the Branch. It was felt that a discussion of these problems by members of the administration would be of service to the community, and would also provide favorable publicity for the Branch, as the sponsor of the discussions.

MAD DOGS AND ENGLISHMEN

also rides motorcycles and may wear a moustache. Both male and female sing folk songs but not in English.

b. The unwashed liberal who wears sports jackets with holes at the elbows. He combs his hair so that it looks as if he had just run his fingers carelessly through it back to front. He smokes dried mango leaves in his ever-present pipe, refuses to wear ties, and leaves the top of his shirt open to display a few manly hairs peeping out. His feet are clad in tennis shoes summer and winter, and he modestly admits to being mad about hard cider, early Bantu lyrics, and ten shilling tarts. Also likes Bartok and authentic Dixieland jazz; he rides a bicycle. The female is practically indistinguishable from the male.

c. The unwashed academic or eccentric don, he of the fertile mind and fatuous body. His room is tastefully prepared chaos of papers (on each of which he has written several illegible words), books, and cigarette ashes, and he claims that no living soul (other than himself) is allowed to touch the mess since only he knows where everything is and should be. Following the classical tradition, the eccentric don is absent-minded. He may attempt to light his French cigarette ("Can't stand the home-grown weeds!") by picking up a live coal in his hands from the grate and will be disturbed only by the curious smell of burning flesh which suddenly permeates the room. In spite of his pre-neanderthal living habits, his well-planned disregard of proper dress, and his typical attitude of being half in Oxford and half in eighth century Persia, he is outwardly a pleasant, helpful chap who gladly breezes up to London to broadcast for the Tird Programme on the newly discovered laundry lists of John Donne or is perfectly prepared to believe with childlike innocence the blatant lies of a stout-sodden undergraduate who didn't appear for a tutorial. The female don is of no interest whatsoever to anyone--herself most of all.

4. The Tellurider is used to precision in corporate affairs. Meetings of the Association, of Cornell Branch, and of the Deep Springs Student Body are conducted with solemn devotion to the King James Version of Robert's Rules of Order--Revised. The result is that meetings frequently reach such a state of chaos that the only way to avert total disaster is to revert to the escape clause, the committee of the whole. There, common sense prevails, and when order has been established again, the body happily dons the legislative strait jacket. Let me contrast this with a report of a meeting of the Lincoln College (Oxford) Junior Common Room, something similar to House meetings at Cornell Branch.

The main feature of the meeting are the beer pitchers which are filled and emptied frequently. An officer is appointed to look after the beer. Besides the usual useful officers, there are great many useless ones so that the ambitious can be given titles and yet kept out of the machinery. The actual work, of course, is carried on in the President's room over glasses of South African sherry. Following is an accurate record:

PRESIDENT. (Wiping the foam from his moustache) I say, chaps, it looks as if we have a little money in the kitty.

VOICE FROM THE REAR. Shame!

PRESIDENT. I'll ask the treasurer to make a statement.

TREASURER. (Fumbling with notes) Well... the ball was a smashing success, I mean. We made a total profit of...nine pounds, eight shillings, fourpence, halfpenny.

PRESIDENT. Is that the amount we have to spend, Mr. Treasurer?

VOICE FROM THE REAR. Let the man speak, sir, let him speak! Hic.

TREASURER. Yes...er...yes, I mean.

PRESIDENT. Now, I think we ought to spend this money somehow.

VOICE FROM THE REAR. More beer! (The house breaks into wild cheering, the PRESIDENT regaining order only after prolonged efforts).

PRESIDENT. So I asked George to make up a list of things we might buy with the money. Is George here?

MANY VOICES FROM THE REAR. George! George! (George is found)

GEORGE. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT. Yes, George.

GEORGE. Well, I've got some ideas written down somewhere.

VOICE FROM REAR. The bloody fool has ideas!

ANOTHER VOICE FROM THE REAR. To the galleys with the blighter! (A sea chanty is started in a corner and shushed only when the PRESIDENT threatens to remove the beer pitchers, a threat which is greeted with cries of "tyranny, sir, tyranny!")

GEORGE. I really don't like any of the ideas. (A pause)

STUDIOUS CHAP IN FRONT ROW. I think we ought to save the money for a bigger ball next term.

VOICE FROM THE REAR. Good show, Alfie! (General agreement)

PRESIDENT. That's a good idea, Alfie. Do you want to form a committee of one to look into the thing?

ALFIE. Well...

VOICE FROM THE REAR. Sticky wickets, old boy? (Cheers)

PRESIDENT. Good. That's all right, isn't it?

VOICES FROM EVERYWHERE. (In swelling chorus) No!!

PRESIDENT. Now, the...uh, next item of business.

TREASURER. I say, Barclay.

PRESIDENT. Yes, Harcourt?

TREASURER. I've been looking at the books. I think there's a mistake somewhere.

VOICE FROM THE REAR. Shame!

TREASURER. I mean we still have a bill outstanding for...well, I can't quite make out what it's for, but it seems we don't have a credit balance but a debit of two pounds, nine pence.

PRESIDENT. Oh, that's a pity.

VOICE FROM THE REAR. Put 'im on the dole, boys! (Laughter)

PRESIDENT. Well, the next...item of business. (A faint burp is heard in the distance.) And so it goes. Telluriders, take warning.

5. Be careful of tea time. For example, the first time you meet a lady, it is perfectly permissible to invite her to your quarters for tea. She comes, and you find yourself alone in a room with the stranger hardly daring to speak about anything more significant than the Van Gogh print you stuck on the wall a few minutes before to impress her. Luckily, the English provide several ways to avoid social contact. There is, to be sure, the ritual of the tea itself. There are rules about the preparation of the brew, the pouring, even the drinking. These all take a good deal of time. But the best conversation stopper is the food. There is a great deal of it. You start with burnt crumpets; bits of dough with holes in them through which melted butter drips onto your shirts. Then come varieties of cookies (called biscuits) and marvelously clever pastry inventions which squirt whipped cream on the chin. This is topped off with stale fruit cake, and the whole process takes hours. The final result is that the mind is deadened, you're stuffed with indigestibles so that you can't eat any dinner (and you're in luck here), and you've killed two hours without arousing the ire of the college, the university, the police, or the Church of England. Let me add that the tea, itself, is very good, but you don't go to tea for tea.

CONCLUSION. The grim fact is that there is no conclusion. Advice or no advice, the odds are that any Tellurider who comes to Europe will have to recapitulate the whole messy business by himself. So bon voyage, ambitious scholar!

PERSONALS

Robt. Albright suffered an attack of polio in Dec. He is now at the Univ. of Buffalo Chronic Disease Research Institute, 2183 Main St., Buffalo 14, a center where they specialize in cases like his. His mother wrote on April 1: "He has come a long way back on the road to recovery since Dec. 5. He only has to be in the iron lung part of the time; is on the rocking bed mostly. He is able to breath without assistance for four hours, but the paralysis of his arms and breathing will take a long time to overcome."

****

Gordon M. Petersen is busily correcting the galley proofs of a new calculus text. For two years he has been in the Dept. of Math. of the Univ. of Okla. He lives in a small house with a piano and reports that he thrives on his own cookery.

****

Norris Smith, doing graduate study on a Ford Foundation grant at Harvard, will receive his M.A. in June. Smith will spend the following 14 months in the Far East on a Ford grant, where he will do research on the present Chinese economy and do further study on the Chinese language. He will trek to Hong Kong by way of Europe and India, arriving in Sept.

****

Robert Richter is presently a Medical Social Worker for the Univ. of Oregon Medical School Hospital.

MORE PERSONALS

Dr. Erik Reed of the National Park Service has recently had a change of title and function from Regional Archeologist to Regional Chief of Interpretation and is in charge of biological and geological as well as historical and archeological research and interpretation work of the Service in the Southwest (including the "Middle SW" as well as the SW proper - Ark to Nev.)

Reed has published about 100 technical articles, reviews, and notes, mostly in Southwestern archeology. He visited the Marianas and Hawaiian Islands in 1952 as an Interior Dept. assignment, primarily for a survey of historical and archaeological remains and preservation needs on Guam; and in 1953 he was with Heyerdahl and The Norwegian Archeological Expedition to the Galapagos. The Reeds have a daughter, 14, and a son, 12.
